

ABSTRACT

- A page layout markup language provides a syntax that allows an author
- 5 to create a document using a plurality of definitions. In one implementation, a document definition references at least one section. A section definition, contained within the document definition, references at least one page. A page definition, contained within the section definition, references at least one region. A region definition, contained within the page definition, is used to
- 10 display content.
